

Online journals, research materials, ebooks, workforce materials, and much more – available for Texans through the state’s libraries.

TexShare Benefits Texans Every Day

TexShare is a library program that encourages the sharing of resources between Texas libraries to offer a broader range of services to you, the library customer. It is a program administered by the Texas State Library and Archives Commission.

What are the TexShare databases?

The TexShare Database Program provides a wealth of electronic database resources to libraries at a significant cost savings. These resources are powerful research tools available 24 hours a day in the homes or offices of registered patrons of participating Texas libraries.

This rich array of e-resources include full-text articles from journals, newspapers, magazines, research reports, tutorials, certification practice materials, e-books, and many other sources. Among the available databases, you'll find resources for education, business development, workforce training, genealogy, academic research, business, health, and hobbies.

How Can I Access Them?

If your local library participates in the TexShare databases program, you'll find a link on its website. Most public library patrons will need to request a TexShare login and password from a reference librarian in order to access these exclusive, licensed research databases.

What's a TexShare Card?

With a TexShare Card issued from your home library, you can visit other participating libraries across the state and check out physical materials as if you were a local card-holder there.

TexShare is brought to you by funding from the State of Texas, the Institute of Museum and Library Services, and member library fees. It is administered by the Texas State Library and Archives Commission.
